To reach maximum voters, Maharashtra government aimed at providing benefits of government schemes under one roof.

This scheme was launched at the district of Satara by organising a two-day camp for the people to create awareness regarding the government schemes that were launched for the benefit of the various schemes. Later the programmes have also been held at Latur, Kolhapur, Gadchiroli, and Nashik. As a result of this drive, people should be able to take advantage of all government programs and avail the facility of getting the documents supplied under one roof. Before launching of this scheme, the common people have to move from one department to other to understand the process of a particular government scheme and sometimes they have even to stand and wait in a long queue.

For coordination, a special cell has been established in the CM's office. The funding granted to various departments can be used by district collectors to plan the camps. Government have also provided free buses for common people to reach the camps and grab the opportunities. 82 officers and employees were appointed to help and solve the problem of common people regarding the scheme.
